A RED CROSS HUT IN FRANCE

WITH MISS KATE WOLF PRESIDING OVER ENTERTAINMENT.

Two of Our Boys Write of How Miss Wolf Delighted Them with Comforts and Eats.

To the several friends who sent Miss Wolf a camera she writes:

You are just the most thoughtful friends to send me such a nice camera. It arrived yesterday, now for the first clear day to take some pictures.

Yesterday for the first time we had two who knew anything about Gettysburg. Both are R. R. Engineers. The first one ran the passenger train from Baltimore to Highfield on that division for nine years. He wants to write and tell how much he likes stopping here for a schooner of coffee or chocolate. The other was in camp there last summer.—he was only here long enough to have a sandwich and coffee. He said he would always remember how fine every one there was to the boys, as he he expressed it, "The people of Gettysburg could not do enough for the fellows, and the old soldiers were great." All the railroad men [illegible] the road through [illegible] drink. [illegible] flowers they have [illegible] stations [illegible] piano [illegible] to be able to give wounded boys a little [illegible] over here.

Two of my [illegible] this morning [illegible] you think [illegible] money to [illegible] "Tramps." [illegible] themselves Miss Wolf's Tramps. An officer [illegible] take [illegible] know what [illegible] always get a number.—they just arrive.

May 27.

Again I was interrupted. Just now every one is sitting quiet with books and papers. Five Tommies are with us for some hours, they have shaved and had shower baths and settled for a few minutes.—My spare time these days has been taken up with painting benches and making window curtains for our new hut. I'll be just nicely in the paint mess when some one comes and says "you are wanted." To-day I asked some one to swear for me for Douval knocked over the paint can and I returned in time to find the contents running over the floor as fast as it could travel. I used all the French at my command which tried to tie up my tongue, but I said what I wanted to just the same.

Following are the two letters which Miss Wolf mentioned were on their way. They are from men belonging to the U. S. R. R. Troops who want to express to the Fund contributors their appreciation of the Fund and to say just what Miss Wolf's work has meant to them.

R. R. Engineer Writes.

Somewhere in France.
May 18.

I suppose you will be somewhat surprised to hear from me as you have never even seen me. But Miss Wolf asked me if I would write and tell you I received some of the chocolate and cigarettes. I told her I would and I want to be just as good as my word.

No doubt I have seen you for I put in nine years on the Western Maryland and have taken rest at Gettysburg many a time.

I was tired and hungry the evening I met Miss Wolf at the Red Cross and she sure did fix me up with a fine supper and also made me some nice pan cakes. I sure will never forget her and I expect to go and see her quite often as I am running an American locomotive over here.

I want to thank you all for the cigarettes as I had finished smoking my last one just before I met Miss Wolf and I still had another day and a night to go before I would reach camp to get any. Miss Wolf certainly does her part by the boys and you can get something to eat any time you go around.

This is certainly some country for rain, but I am beginning to get used to it. I think it is one of the prettiest places I have ever been in. They have a fine road bed but I don't think much of their engines and cars. One of our cars will haul six or seven times as much as theirs, so you can imagine how they look.

PVT. R. W. HARMISON,
Railway Troops, A. E. F.
France, May 14, 1918.

A Trooper Writes.

On a recent trip from one section of France to another I stopped over at an American Red Cross station under the supervision of Miss Wolf, who accorded me a very cordial reception, made me very comfortable; told me many interesting stories anent her remarkable experiences when with the American Ambulance, and incidentally gave me a treat when she presented me with several bars of chocolate, saying that your fund, not she, was the donor. This letter therefore, is sent you that you may know of my very sincere appreciation of the courtesy. We "Troopers" are able to purchase chocolate in France and of course it is good, but I may say that I have a preference for our American variety because it seems to be just a little bit better and sweeter.

The American Red Cross Rest Rooms I have been in are delightful rendezvous for travel worn folks. Invariably you will find opportunity enough to gratify the cravings of inner-man. Everything served is dainty [illegible] in such abundance and with [illegible] good cheer that a fellow feels [illegible] at home and is made so [illegible] at your [illegible] to be [illegible] are [illegible] comfortable; and you can spend the night [illegible] a mighty comfortable bed at no [illegible] expense. I always plan to stop at [illegible] Rest Rooms whenever I travel [illegible] I've met some splendid young [illegible] who are rendering the great [illegible] service at no small [illegible] sacrifice to themselves.

France is especially beautiful at [illegible] of the year, reminding me [illegible] much of dear old California, [illegible] where I have my home.

The enclosed booklet entitled "America's Way to the War in [illegible]" is sent to you as a token of [illegible] appreciation of your fine courtesy.

W. C. T. U. CONVENTION.

Officers Elected for the Year at the Fairfield Meeting.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Adams County was [illegible] entertained during the [illegible] annual convention by the hospitable people of Fairfield, he ride toward the mountains passing the ripe [illegible] and growing corn was inspiring and the graceful welcome from Mrs. J. B. McCullough was responded to by one of the oldest Union in Gettysburg. After the reports from the corresponding secretary and treasurer, telling of growth and increased interest in the work, the election of officers was held resulting in the election of Mrs. E. Belle Weidner, President; Miss Bess Raffensperger, Corresponding Secretary; and Mrs. J. Charles Knox, Treasurer. Mrs. Eldon declining to continue as vice president, Mrs. H. W. Raffensperger of Bendersville, was elected to succeed her and Miss May Peters, Recording Secretary.

A memorial service was then held during the noontide hour of prayer, for departed members during the past year: Mrs. Philip Houck, Mrs. George Reichle, Mrs. Goldsborough, Mr. Reeser, honorary member, Mrs. Louise Stabley Strevig, Mrs. Wilson Bream, Miss Jennie T. Montfort.

The afternoon session was occupied in hearing reports from the Superintendent and the fifteen Departments. Introduction of all local presidents and the two pastors, Rev. W. S. Bonnell and Rev. C. W. Heller with several selections of music.

Much regret that no delegates were there from Abbottstown, East Berlin, Littlestown or York Springs, but the newest union at Mt. Joy was well represented, they having doubled their membership during the first year.

The evening was devoted to a national pageant when Columbia introduced all the States that have ratified the Amendment for Prohibition, that was very interesting and effective. This was followed by a medal contest by five young ladies from different parts of the county, Miss Martha Boyer receiving the gold medal.

County Graduates.

The commencement of Shippensburg State Normal School will be held next week, June 23-26. The alumni meeting will be of unusual interest and all alumni are being urged to be present. In the graduating class there are four from Adams county: E. Blanche Heiges, Biglerville; C. Edith Weigle, Biglerville; Lester G. Sachs, Gettysburg; Harper J. Wentz, East Berlin. In the other classes of the school during the year there were 75 other students from the county.

IMPROVED CENTER SQUARE

A WHITE WAY DIAMOND AS A GREETING.

Plans Are Finished and Work to Start Immediately by Citizens' Committee.

The Center Square or Diamond in Gettysburg is finally to be improved. It is to be architecturally perfected and beautified and not by the borough authorities but by our enterprising business men, specially those on the Square. The Compiler years ago advocated and urged cement pavements by the borough and finally they came. An ornamental lighting was also urged but it takes time to get all these things. The Town Fathers have now placed the project in the hands of a committee of citizens and the contribution from borough treasurer at start will be small.

George C. Baum, the Philadelphia architect, has been consulted and has been here in consultation over plans and a design of simplicity yet beautiful is in process of being worked out. The center will be raised in a circle of about 80 feet in diameter and about two steps high, making comfortable resting place. The center will have a cross of cement walks with cross walks in the four corners. In the center circle, a lamp post on [illegible] cluster of lamps. There will be eight lamp posts [illegible] with single lamps. The street from this center feature to curb will be about 70 feet wide.

Materials have been provided and everything is ready to begin work as soon as plans have been received and they are overdue now. The center lamp post has been donated and three of the other eight posts and a number of subscriptions are in sight, and the prospects are for a more beautiful Center Square before the summer months have flown. There will be one or more drinking fountains in the Square.

STATE DEMOCRATS ORGANIZE

ELECT GEO. R. McLEAN AS STATE CHAIRMAN.

Judge Wescott at the Bonniwell Reception Declares the Only Issue—Win the War.

The Democratic State Committee met in Harrisburg on Wednesday. Joseph I. Weaver, of New Oxford, State Committeeman of Adams county, was in attendance. The business of the committee was largely that of electing a chairman to conduct the campaign. The choice of six-sevenths of the State ticket was for George R. McLean of Wilkes-Barre, brother of William S. McLean, who was elected chairman in 1916, and is serving with the army in France. Judge Bonniwell's choice was Henry C. Niles, of York. Bonniwell and his suporters wanted control of the State organization, headquarters, platform and campaign committees and war chest. Palmer and his friends control the committee and were willing to give Bonniwell representation on campaign and platform committees and stamch support in the campaign with all resources. On a vote for chairman McLean received 91 votes and Niles 21 votes and former was declared chairman.

The matter of the platform was placed in the hands of a committee headed by Bonniwell. Democratic candidate for Governor, was rendered a reception on Tuesday evening, which was called to order by that Democratic war horse, Ben Myers, of Harrisburg, and turned over to Henry C. Niles as chairman.

Judge John W. Wescott, of Camden, who at both the Baltimore and St. Louis conventions made the nominating speech for Woodrow Wilson made a brilliant address.

He declared there was no political issue before the people save only that of winning the war. If we lose this war we will have the German god of blood and lust, the German religion of brutality and women will be but brackets of fodder for cannon. Liberty will disappear from the face of the earth.

He denounced the Republican State Committee meeting in Philadelphia recently "as the most stupid piece of camouflage ever pulled off in any age," when upon Democrats there was poured condemnation and that if their patriotism was sincere they should have said to the Democrats, "come and help us win the war," for there are no other political issues before the people.

As an onlooker at Pennsylvania politics, he said, there are too many politicians of the professional type in this Commonwealth. The professional politician, he added, is one who stands behind a bargain counter selling political peanuts. Another type of politician, he said, studies policies and systems and spends his time for the public good—he is a statesman.

Every reference of the speaker to President Wilson was greeted with applause and prolonged cheers.

Bonniwell's Speech.

Judge Bonniwell introduced, spoke as follows:

Deeply grateful for the very great honor conferred upon me by the Democracy of Pennsylvania, and sensible of the grave responsibilities resting upon me. I take this opportunity to present to the people of our Commonwealth those matters which I deem of major importance in this campaign.

The Uniform Primary law having supplanted State conventions, and there existing no recognized body within the Commonwealth authorized to enunciate the issues of a campaign, it therefore devolves upon the nominee for Governor to state the rule of conduct by which, if he shall be elected, his official action will be regulated.

The world conflict for human liberties and progress, in which the United States are now engaged, demands of every citizen the absolute dedication of all that he is and has for the support of our Government, to the end that complete and everlasting victory may be secured for our ideals; and I deem it my duty to say that to this degree of patriotic devotion I believe that my compatriots of different political faith are equally willing to pledge themselves to our country's cause.

I pledge myself to the most earnest and untiring support of the worthy compeer of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln, the leader in world thought to-day—our great President, Wodrow Wilson.

Our first care, therefore, should be to see that the whole strength of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania shall be used in co-operation with the United States Government to secure the triumph of Democracy in its present death grapple with autocracy and tyranny.

As Democrats we reaffirm our devotion to the old-time Democratic principle of loyalty to the Constitution of the United States as the great charter of our national liberties, and we emphatically declare our opposition to needless amendments to that time-honored work of the fathers of our country.

Reform Impossible to Republicans.

Disappointing experience has proved that genuine reform is impossible through either Republican faction. Each admits that the other is accustomed by crimes of treachery and violence to gain and retain power, for the plunder of the Commonwealth and its municipalities.

Temporarily ignoring their quarrels over division of the spoil, the several party chiefs are again united with ignoble energy and craft, to prevent the Government from being intrusted to faithful officials. They are ambushed behind the pretense of excessive morality.

The same wily manipulators who have thwarted practical measures for social improvements now, with unblushing effrontery, appeal for preferment because of their professed suddenly-acquired sanctity as apostles of temperance. With a cynical insincerity, unusual even in Republican circles, appeal is now made to one class of voters because Republican candidates pretend to favor the Prohibition Amendment; while the support of the other class is expected, because of records which ought to be satisfactory to the most antagonistic opponent.

I reaffirm without qualifications my pre-primary declaration: That the National Prohibition Amendment raises squarely the question of self-government; that it is a clear violation of the spirit of the Constitution of the United States and an unwarranted interference with the rights of the individual States; and that [illegible] the Union believe [illegible] that [illegible] in all matters affecting its internal morality.

The thoughtful American, seeing in the marvelous growth, strength and permanency existing in our Union of States a signal proof of the wisdom of its constitutional system, should gravely hesitate before he approves a tendency which may destroy it. Every specific declaration in the Constitution, as well as every ratified amendment, is declaratory of a human right. It is proposed by the pending amendment, for the first time in American history, to deny a heretofore unchallenged personal right. If one right may be denied, other or all rights may be brought within the ban making our boasted freedom a hollow mockery, a sham and a delusion.

To enjoy the full measure of our boundless wealth, population and resources, there are many matters of internal concern requiring legislative correction, to which I pledge myself. A just appreciation of the loyal and indispensable parts filled by labor and agriculture in this world crisis calls for a statement of my position toward those bodies and their measures.

I shall oppose without compromise the repeal of the Full-Crew law, or of any other law which protects the life, safety or prosperity of the workers of Pennsylvania.

Economic Justice.

I shall support legislation providing for a comprehensive employees' insurance against sickness and old age.

There cannot be, when peace is restored, a return to the economic conditions which were so rapidly widening the chasm between capital and labor. The producers—whether from the soil or from manual toil—are unquestionably entitled to a full and fair share in the products of their labor. The State should provide for the adequate representation of labor and agriculture on the Public Service Commission, the Compensation Board and all other bodies dealing with either the products or the personal welfare of these great bodies. The period of waiting should be reduced in the Compensation law to one week, and the payments should be not less than two-thirds of the injured employee's earnings.

I would seek an efficient method for the establishment of direct relations between the producer and the consumer.

The re-establishment of the waterways of Pennsylvania, their expansion and intelligent operation and a practical and scientific construction of good roads, located solely because

JUNE 28 U. S. WAR SAVINGS DAY

Be Sure to Pledge the Buying of War Savings Stamps Before June 28.

Lest we forget!

He who can forget the little ones that lie mangled 50 fathoms deep under the shattered hulk of the Lusitania; who has no reverence for the dead and their devotion, no prayer for the dying and their anguish, no pity for the bereaved and the broken; whose blood is not quickened by our perils, whose heart is not softened by our pains; who reads unmoved of blasted homes and wasted countrysides, of desolated cities, and desecrated shrines, of heroic Belgium overrun but not conquered; of epic France and the noble dead that lie buried there—the great dead that fought and the innocent dead that merely wept and waited. He who can forget these things, or be indifferent to the sacrifices and the sorrows, the bereavements, and the burdens of Freedom's Gethsemanes—that man is a Hun at heart, for the crimes that none but a Hun can commit, none but a Hun can forget!

After a reading of this do you not feel more desirous than ever of saving to the utmost of your capacity and of buying War Savings Stamps?

Save Coal

Uncle Sam needs it for war purposes. Every ton you save this summer can be used to heat your home next winter. Save it.

One way is to use an oil cook stove instead of the coal range. That won't be a hardship, but a big advantage. That is if you buy the right oil cook stove.

NEW PERFECTION

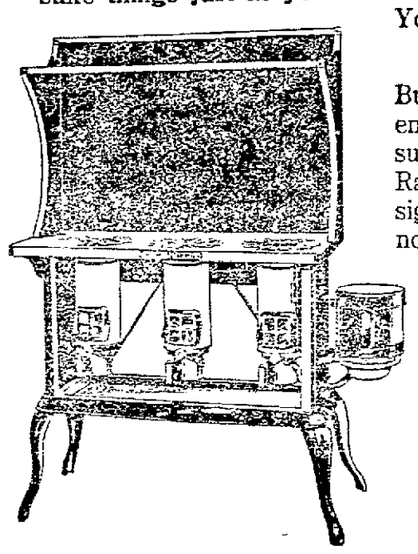
are now giving satisfactory service in millions of American homes. A New Perfection will give you this same satisfactory service—a really better service (especially in hot weather) than your coal range ever has or ever will. You don't have coal or wood to carry—no dusty ashes to fly all over. And a New Perfection does not make the kitchen almost unbearably hot like a range does. But it will boil and fry and bake things just as you like them. It's always ready at the scratch of a match. You'll be delighted with the splendid results.



Besides, it burns a most economical fuel—kerosene. But the kind of kerosene you use makes a big difference. All kerosenes are not alike in quality. To be sure of always getting best results use Atlantic Rayolight Oil. Buy it at the store that displays this sign "Atlantic Rayolight Oil For Sale Here." It costs no more than ordinary kinds but it's worth more. Go to your nearest dealer now and select your New Perfection Oil Cook Stove.

Please Do Not Ask Our Operators for the Correct Time

A Necessary War-Time Request

WHEN a subscriber lifts his telephone receiver and asks: "What is the time, please?" the same service on the part of the operator, the same length of time and an equal use of telephone equipment generally are necessary as are required to complete an ordinary telephone call.

In every telephone central office there is a switchboard with a certain number of operators' positions; at each position is an operator; before each operator a certain number of subscribers' lines terminate. If these telephone facilities are taxed to their utmost and a large percentage of the calls is for the time of day, the telephone user will appreciate that to eliminate such calls will permit a reassignment or redistribution of both operators' service and telephone equipment and result in our being able to care for the abnormal demands of the present, and the even greater demands that we feel will be made upon our service in the months to come.

Every true American sees his personal obligation in the great National task at hand. The Telephone Company is keenly alive to the responsibility that rests upon it. Will you make only the necessary telephone calls and so assist this Company in its service?

CARPOLL.

Put an End to Prussianism.

Robert Lansing, U. S. Secretary of State at luncheon last week put in most forceful language our aims, saying among other things:

"It is the supreme task of civilization to put an end to Prussianism. To listen to proposals for a Prussian peace, to compromise with the butchers of individuals and of nations so that they would by agreement gain a benefit for their crimes, would be to compound an international felony, which this Republic will never do the very thought of war is abhorrent: Prussia wickedly sought war, and Prussia shall have war and more war and more war, until the very thought of war is abhorrent to the Prussian mind. So I read the spirit of America So I read the supreme purpose of the Allies. Victory lies before us, and beyond victory a just and enduring peace. Until that peace is sure America cannot and will not put aside the sword. Let us keep our banners unfurled and our trumpets sounding to battle until victory is achieved."

What's the Use?

I am [illegible] to criticize. I use the word in its precise, accurate sense of fault finding—because my complaints have not been productive of one iota of good.

Moreover, they have always been ungraciously received either by the person whose good I sought or by the person upon whom he was dependent. I was depending. Those whose good I sought have not listened to me.

"Minnie," said I to my maid, whose stupid looks had become a trial to be endured no longer in silence, "do you know that you go about with your mouth open?"

"Yes'm," answered Minnie stolidly. "I opened it."

I have been rudely treated when my motive was purely unselfish.

"Madam," said I to a stranger in a city shop, "your belt is unfastened."

"That," answered the lady, "is the way I wish it to be."—Atlantic.

"COAL FAMINE INEVITABLE"

Mine Workers' Secretary So Tells St. Paul Convention.

St. Paul.—"Nothing can save the United States from a coal famine next winter. It will be of incalculable severity and no way will be found to prevent it." This statement was made in the American Federation of Labor convention. William Green, secretary of the miners, said: "Forty thousand miners have left the anthracite fields. Even with sufficient cars the output will be millions of tons short."

PERSHING NEEDS ALL U. S. STEEL

Huge Munitions Orders Will Withdraw Metal From Other Uses.

ALLIES TO RECEIVE A PART.

Nation May Require Entire Output for Period of War—Situation Serious Not Only for French Army, But American Forces, Too.

Washington.—Huge orders for munitions and steel supplies which have come unexpectedly from General Pershing in the last few days created the prospect that the entire iron and steel output for the rest of the war would be used for direct military and naval purposes. Edwin F. Parker, chairman of the priorities division of the War Industries Board, said that it had become apparent that the demand for steel could not only be met but it was feared the supply might be insufficient to meet the need.

Statements [illegible] General Pershing's [illegible] for 2,000,000 tons of projectiles and shells in [illegible] the [illegible] 1,000,000 [illegible] steel products [illegible] with the request. It was [illegible] would result in withdrawing the [illegible] steel from every other [illegible] this country and concentrate it on vital needs for winning the war.

It was understood that under the rooling plan discussed at the War Council some of the supplies represented General Pershing's new orders would go to the British and French armies. The needs of the French have been suddenly augmented by reason of the fact that certain iron mines as well as iron and coal mines fell into the hands of the Germans in the recent drive.

More than 10,000 shells and projectiles weighing about 3,000,000 tons have been used by each side since the beginning of the German drive on March 21, it was stated here.

The new requirements of General Pershing were [illegible] of that volume of munitions. Neither officials of the War Industries Board nor other departments would [illegible] the extent of General Pershing's needs in this [illegible] to be found in the latest requests that have come from him. In fact, they were regarded as forerunners of other orders of possibly greater proportions.

Skeptical of German Starvation.

The latest "well-informed" and anonymous correspondents who obligingly give us a picture of food conditions in Germany do not add anything material to previous stories of the kind. We are not greatly impressed by the reported offer of a ham for £11; "well-informed neutrals" have provided us with much higher quotations in the past. Judging by the way in which Berlin has consistently been reported to be starving since the autumn of 1914, the Boche must by now have acquired the art of living entirely on air—or "substitutes."—London Globe.

OFFICERS' UNIFORMS AT COST.

May Purchase Them From Quartermaster at Great Saving.

Washington. — An arrangement for officers to purchase uniforms from the quartermaster's department at cost was announced by the war department.

Heretofore officers have had to purchase their clothing outside, and many complaints have been made that dealers have taken advantage of the fact to raise prices beyond a reasonable level.

As Good as a Gold Mine.

Professor White estimates that no fewer than 400,000,000 gas mantles are used every year, and as these gas mantles cannot be manufactured without a substance named thorium, the necessity for obtaining a large supply is obvious. Some time ago the manufacturers were, indeed, at a loss to discover sufficient for their purpose. Their anxiety was removed quite unexpectedly when a stranger walked into the office of one of the great incandescent companies and offered to show where an unlimited supply could be obtained.

He demanded £100,000 for the information, and this sum the company readily undertook to pay. The directors were, however, doubtful of his ability to carry out his promise, but after obtaining a contract he took a representative of the company to Brazil, where huge deposits of thorium were discovered. From this place most of the thorium now in use is obtained. The stranger had discovered the find quite accidentally.

Smoke-Cured.

To be strictly accurate, it was not a smoking compartment, but the youth was puffing away at a chubby briar, despite the pained expression on the old lady's face and by the old lady, who was evidently another occupant of the carriage, began to get excited.

"Young man," she [illegible] as far as her coughing would [illegible] "do you know that it's wrong to smoke?"

"Well," replied the lad as he enveloped the old party in a wreath of pungent smoke, "I use tobacco for my health."

"Health!" ejaculated the old lady, in spluttering tones. "Nonsense! You never heard of any one being cured by smoking."

"Yes, I have," declared the youth, still puffing away like a furnace chimney; "that's the way they cure pigs."

"Then smoke away," cried the heroine of the story; "there may be hope for you yet."

Friend Autoist: We don't pretend to tell you anything about carbon. It's a standard motor curse which [illegible] out," but seldom entirely eat out of your motor. At that carbon is a good stuff—in its place. Thus it may be life to the electric light—while it is death to gasoline motor efficiency.

You should do what thousands of satisfied autoists are doing. They give their motors HY-SIGN CARBON REMOVER and find it is sure death to carbon.

HY-SIGN improves the quality of your "gas," giving 25% to 40% more mileage on same amount of gasoline—thus making for greater increased efficiency and economy these war times of high gasoline prices.

Hull [illegible] of Two Parallel Cylindrical Shells Joined Throughout Length by Diaphragms.

The French government has contracted with the Ford company, which is building wooden ships for the Emergency Fleet Corporation, to turn out for it five cargo "unsinkable ships" of 4,200 tons dead weight.

The hull of these ships, says the New York Sun, is to consist of two parallel cylindrical shells joined throughout their length by a series of heavily braced diaphragms. Each cylindrical shell is divided not only into watertight compartments by transverse bulkheads, but also is isolated entirely from the adjoining shell and from the second space between the two. The latter space, which has a watertight bottom and deck, is not used for cargo, but is provided solely for reserve buoyancy.

"It [illegible] be called an unsinkable ship," said Mr. Doero. "I would call it rather one of the less sinkable ships. It is seldom that a ship has received more than one torpedo. It is extremely improbable that a ship will be struck by torpedoes on both sides. We have tested an experimental design thoroughly at Paris, and have found it entirely satisfactory. The space required for the special hull construction does not materially lessen the bulk of cargo that can be carried. We are convinced the ship will keep afloat."

Cut Out the Jumps!

Have you "the jumps"—or other manifestations of nervousness? Are you easily confused or startled at unexpected noises or sounds? Do you worry or fret over trivialities? Then look to your nerves. Something is radically wrong with them.

Upset nervous conditions usually result from some exhausted or impaired bodily organ, which does not properly give it's allotted service. Go after the offender through that great recuperatory center of the body—your stomach. Ask your druggist for DR. CHARLES TONIC TABLETS. They are the very best of preparations to soothe and smooth the racked and exhausted nerves of nervous prostration victims. Those who are debilitated; those who suffer from the groaning burden of liver and kidney trouble, will once more turn toward health, by using this splendid formula.

The great wreckers of women's delicately balanced nervous systems as exemplified in the special ills peculiar to their sex—will be quickly relieved by DR. CHARLES TONIC TABLETS, which also present the gift of rich red blood to the anaemic. The TONIC will also go far to arrest and vanish dyspepsia and many wasting diseases that lead to consumption.

There are no injurious "come backs" to DR. CHARLES TONIC TABLETS—and they will achieve marvellous recuperative results, where other tonics and reconstructives, such as iron, strychnine, arsenic, cod liver oil, etc., often fail. Safe and pleasant to take.

PRICE 50 CENTS A BOX

If your druggists does not carry them, send 50 CENTS and we will send a box by mail.

HENRY FORD

Auto Maker Will Accept Democratic Nomination for Senate.

Washington.—Henry Ford, at the request of President Wilson, will accept the nomination of the Democrats of Michigan for United States senator, to succeed Senator William Alden Smith, who retires at the end of his present term.

LABOR QUOTAS JULY 15

Nonessentials May Close to Relieve "Perilous Shortage."

Manufacturers Must Help Government, War Labor Board Announces at Conference.

Washington.—War industries of the United States are "perilously short of men."

The shortage must be relieved "at any cost."

Nonessential plants may have to close.

Sacrifice and loss may have to be endured "by man after man."

All manufacturers will be forced to cooperate with the government in its man finding task.

"Pitiless publicity" will be the portion of every employer who fails to do his part.

These were the striking features of the government's war labor program driven home to the heads of the United States employment service system of the department of labor in attendance at the first national war labor conference here. Representatives from all states were present.

The speakers were officials of the department of labor. The policies outlined were declared to be those of the administration.

The federal employment service will begin the exclusive handling of common labor recruiting on July 15. Later, it will take over skilled labor recruiting. Eventually it is planned to prevent any employer from hiring a man unless he has a card issued to him by the employment service.

Between now and July 15, the various war industries are to send to the employment service estimates of their common labor requirements. State quotas then will be determined.

Assistant Secretary of Labor Louis F. Post asserted that "by the time the peace treaty is signed the old division between employers and employees as distinct classes will have passed away."

U. S. WILL RUSH TROOPS.

Peace Only by Victory, President Wilson Says.

Washington.—Flag Day was marked by a declaration by President Wilson that United States troops are to be poured into France in ever increasing numbers "until the forces of freedom are made overwhelming." This was his pledge given in a cablegram to President Poincare of France. The president declared for peace with victory.

ALLIES URGE JAPAN TO ACT.

Tokio Divided on Intervention, but Army Is Preparing.

Tokio.—The Entente governments are bringing increasing influence to bear to induce Japan to intervene in Russia. Among several French officers who have arrived in Tokio to consult with the general staff is Major Pichon, who was head of the French military mission to Russia. Apparently, Japan is divided on the question of intervention, but the army is undergoing severe training.

WILSON FOR WORLD SUFFRAGE.

Woman's Right to Equal Franchise as Principle in Peace.

Washington.—President Wilson took leadership in a movement for world-wide woman suffrage. In response to a memorial from the French union for woman suffrage organizations of Great Britain, Belgium, Italy and Portugal he went on record that equal franchise rights for women shall be definitely established among all nations as a principle achievement in the winding of permanent peace.

BIG VICTORY WON BY ALLIES

Move Carefully Planned by Hindenburg Met and Completely Nullified.

HIS LAST CHANCE PASSING.

Efforts to Weaken Defense to Breaking Point Foiled by American Reinforcements—The German Morale Shaken.

With the French Armies.—The fifth day of the battle marked the definite check of the German operations after gains of little importance and prodigious losses. The credit goes in no small degree to the general commanding the army that held the sector, who more than justified his already brilliant reputation.

It is now known that the big French counterattack on the left which he launched on Tuesday was a veritable stroke of genius, as an essential factor of the enemy plan was an immediate advance in that very region with the object of reaching the Aronde valley so as to turn the French center and undertake a converging movement upon Compiegne.

The complete dislocation of the projected attack and the substantial progress of the French, despite the very heavy forces opposite to them that had been moved up in preparation for it, threw the whole German tactical scheme out of gear. Hindenburg attempted to counter—eight hours after the French advance began—by a powerful diversion between the Aisne and Villers-Cotterets forest. Here, too, the Germans were checked by the troops in line.

In desperation strong forces, estimated at 20,000 to 40,000 men, were thrust against the newly line from Coeuvres to Mery. The result was literally disastrous. The French soldiers, keyed to the highest pitch by the successes of the last 48 hours, surpassed their former performances and refused to allow the Germans to gain a yard of ground. After eight hours' vain and costly efforts the attack was abandoned through sheer exhaustion.

As the situation stands today the allies have won a great victory in one of the hardest fought battles of the war, and a carefully planned move in Hindenburg's desperate struggle against time has been met and nullified. The Germans have also learned to their cost that the American troops are already to be counted with. The enemy, whose morale is daily weakening under the strain of successes and never ending calls upon his strength, has received a bitter reminder of the American menace, which more than any other factor is responsible for his convulsive striving after a speedy decision.

Large forces are still held in reserve by the German command, and where they will be thrown into the next great effort to end the war is now a subject for speculation.

With the obviously stiffened allied power exhibited in the last offensive, confidence in Foch's ability to stem the new tide when it sweeps forward has markedly increased.

CONTINUALLY ATTACK U-BOATS.

Geddes Says Destruction of Submarines Outruns Builders.

London.—In an interview with the London correspondent of the Petit Parisien Sir Eric Geddes, first lord of the admiralty, had the following to say with regard to submarines:

"The allied navies continue to sink more German submarines than the enemy can build. It is certainly a fact that since January we have sunk more submarines than they have built. We attack their submarines seventy times a week on the average.

"We base our returns of submarines destroyed only on those we are sure of having seen wrecks or captured the crews, but most of the other submarines hit are in urgent need of repairs, and it is evident that the results of many of our attacks are unknown."

The Sheely Brothers Barn Wind Storm Loss

This barn, a new one, was one of the largest, the best built, the most up-to-date barn in Southern Pennsylvania, yet it did not withstand the wind storm, and the loss is thousands of dollars.

The loss is partly covered by cyclone insurance issued at Martin Winter's office.

The cost of this kind of insurance on a farm barn is $3.75 per $1000 insurance for three years (the rate on houses being lower).

The question therefore for every property owner is,

Does it pay to risk the loss of $1000 for three long years to save $3.75.

It requires less than five minutes to destroy a barn, and there are a good many five minute periods in three years.

RAISE THE LIMIT

Every farmer who has access to a pile of stable manure or who keeps live stock on his farm should have a good manure spreader, a Corn King, this year. Don't let power and help conditions keep you from raising as much as you can on every acre. Use a Low Corn King spreader and either fertilize your fields before planting or top dress your growing crops this year. There is no easier, surer or better way to secure a paying increase in crops from every acre you plant. How would a thirty-bushel to the acre increase in corn, or a ten-bushel increase in wheat look to you this year? All right, then buy and use a

Low Corn King Manure Spreader

Wheels just the right distance apart, and spread wide enough to top dress three rows of corn at once. Three sizes—small, medium and large. All narrow boxes. All steel frames with working parts of the spreader securely attached to the frame. Turns short. Drive from both rear wheels. Return apron driven by worm gear which insures even spreading up hill and down. Pull comes straight on steel frame. Solid two-inch rear axle working in Roller bearings carries seventy-five per cent of the load. All steel beater cannot warp, shrink, or rot. Built up to International Harvester standards of quality in every respect.

Buy a Corn King spreader and use it. The increased yield from a few acres will pay for your spreader this year. Come in and place your order NOW.

Practice Thrift.

The cost of the first year of the war to the American people has been $12,000,000,000, of this amount $2,000,000,000 is to be raised through War Savings Certificates and Thrift Stamps. Adams county's share of this is $986,000 or $20 per capita. It has been estimated that the children of Germany have raised $[illegible] through their Sunday Schools for the Kaiser's War Chest. How much can our Sunday Schools raise?

It is to show the Kaiser the caliber of our Christian Sunday Schools that an effort is being put forth to organize in each of the Sunday Schools of Adams county three War Savings Societies, each to have a membership of not less than ten. It is not necessary that every person belonging to these societies be a member of the Sunday School. Each member pledges himself to practice systematic saving, save clothing and wearing apparel so that the man-power at the factories can be released for the making of Government supplies, buy Thrift Stamps and War Savings Certificates and encourage others to do so.

Membership in one of these societies is a constant reminder to every person to practice thrift. The organizations meet once a month and report the amount of their investment in War Stamps and Certificates.

Let every member ask himself if there are such societies organized in his town and Sunday School. Ask some one else about it. Organize one by getting into communication with your Sunday School Superintendent who has already received letters concerning such organizations from the Adams County Chairman.

The following churches are perfecting the organization of War Savings Societies in the county:

Gettysburg: Christ Luth. Church, Presbyterian Church, Methodist Church, Asbury M. E. Church, Trinity Reformed Church, Marsh Creek Presbyterian Church.

Littlestown: Redeemer's Reformed Church, St. James Reformed Church, St. Luke's (Union Lutheran and Reformed), St. Mark's.

Arendtsville: Reformed Church.
Bendersville: Reformed Church.
Biglerville: Reformed Church.
Mt. Joy: Lutheran Church.

Fined for Lincoln Highway Speeding.

Following a number of complaints about reckless driving on the Lincoln Highway, eighty-two informations were laid before Justice of the Peace John L. Hill by Sergeant Campbell, of the Pennsylvania State Police, charging eighty-two automobile owners with exceeding the speed limit. Practically all of the offenders were tourists, and the majority were from Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and York, and all of them were notified that the fine of $10 and cost of $4 could be paid and the matter closed. The money has been coming in steadily, the fine goes to the State. The offenses were all committed on a measured eighth of a mile course about four miles east of Gettysburg. Sergeant Campbell was stationed there last Sunday. He allowed fifteen seconds for the section, which would have made the car travel at thirty miles an hour. Eighty-two of them went faster than this, so that there was no question of the law being violated, the rate allowed on state highways being only twenty-four miles.

—Mrs. Leah Schnitzer and Mrs. Robert Schnitzer, of Westminster, are spending some time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Myers, Centre Square.

of the needs of the community, and not to serve the speculative or special purposes of some interest, rigorously divorced from political or contractual interests, will be matters of my keenest attention.

I shall insist upon practical measures, sincerely enforced, to prune out idle offices, reduce excessive salaries and enforce rigid economy in all departments, and that appointment and promotion in the civil service of the State shall be upon proof of fitness to perform the duties required, and not because of loyalty to any boss or faction.

I shall favor generous appropriations for the maintenance and necessary enlargement of our great system of asylums and hospitals.

The right of each child to a liberal education is inherent and undeniable. The amazing progress of America in science, invention and development, and the skill of the toilers, alike owe an inexpressible debt to the little red school house and to its pupils. The maintenance and extension of the public school system: adequate pay for its teachers; a proper provision for their pensioning; a just recognition of the value of our great State College and normal schools and their liberal support, shall all be objects of my solicitous care.

Philadelphia Charter Revision.

In full sympathy with the aim sought by the Compulsory Education act, it cannot, nevertheless, be denied that in our great centres of population the execution of the law in its present form works a cruel hardship upon many deserving families, requiring them to suffer privation in clothing and food or become violators of the law. The act should be amended to provide, in proper cases, an allowance from the County Commissioners to supplement the family income, so that the body may not be starved while the mind is fed.

I favor the establishment of a living wage for all workers, without regard to sex.

The prodigal contribution of Pennsylvania to the cause of humanity, in its sterling manhood, its wealth, resources and products, generously given, cannot cease at the return of peace. Thousands of our heroic sons, returning from service, will require our tender solicitude. No son of Pennsylvania should be permitted to regret the day he answered the call of liberty. Great reconstruction hospitals and training schools should now be provided for, and the revenues sought to maintain in honorable condition every enlisted son of our Commonwealth, and, if necessity requires, their dependent ones.

I pledge myself to a revision of the charter of the city of Philadelphia. The present system is antiquated; it has been the source of scandal in the abuse of power. This instrument must be revised in such a way as to give broad powers to the city, allow the fullest measure of self-government, and so arranged as to destroy the vicious political system, founded on contracts and the abuse of the privilege of power, which now shames our whole Commonwealth.

The election laws of Pennsylvania require mandatory provisions which will tear the screen from corrupt election officers and ballot-box stuffers, and prevent partisan service judges from lending their judicial robes as a cloak to ballot fraud and crime.

The tax laws of Pennsylvania should be revised. Taxation should be graduated so that the improvement and use of property shall be encouraged and the maintenance of idle and unimproved lands and buildings correspondingly discouraged.

In these and all other matters of common public concern, for the public weal I pledge an undivided devotion and fidelity, keeping single the thought that the welfare, the honor and the dignity of Pennsylvania are intrusted to the care of its Executive, and that by no conscious act of his should its escutcheon be dimmed.

War-Plant Labor Agency.

President's Proclamation:

For more than a year it has been our pride that not our armies and navies only, but our whole people is engaged in a righteous war. We have said repeatedly that industry plays as essential and honorable a role in this great struggle as do our military armaments. We all recognize the truth of this, but we must also see its necessary implication—namely, that industry, doing a vital task for the nation, must receive the support and assistance of the nation. We must recognize that it is a natural demand—almost a right of any one serving his country, whether employer or employe, to know that his service is being used in the most effective manner possible. In the case of labor this wholesome desire has been not a little thwarted owing to the changed conditions which war has created in the labor market.

There has been much confusion as to essential products. There has been ignorance of conditions—men have gone hundreds of miles in search of a job and wages which they might have found at their doors. Employers handling Government contracts of the highest importance have competed for workers with holders of similar contracts and even with the Government itself, and have conducted expensive campaigns for recruiting labor in sections where the supply of labor was already exhausted. California draws its unskilled labor from as far east as Buffalo, and New York from as far west as the Mississippi. Thus labor has been induced to move fruitlessly from one place to another, congesting the railways and losing both time and money.

Such a condition is unfair alike to employer and employe, but most of all to the nation itself, whose existence is threatened by any decrease in its productive power. It is obvious that this situation can be clarified and equalized by a central agency—the United States employment service of the Department of Labor, with the counsel of the war labor policies board as the voice of all the individual agencies of the Government. Such a central agency must have sole direction of all recruiting of civilian workers in war work; and, in taking over this great responsibility must, at the same time, have power to assure to essential industry an adequate supply of labor, even to the extent of withdrawing workers from nonessential occupations. It must also [illegible] from interference [illegible] and assure [illegible] the [illegible].

[illegible] Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, [illegible] employers [illegible] refrain after March 1, 1918, from recruiting [illegible] prompt the [illegible] central agency. I urge labor to respond as loyally and here to [illegible] by this agency [illegible] in the essential industries. And I ask three hundred thousand employers that no sacrifice will have been in vain if we are able to prove beyond all question that the highest and best form of efficiency is the spontaneous co-operation of a free people.

War Work for Girls.

On Monday, June 17th, Mrs. S. F. Snyder and Miss Marguerite Hearsey entertained a group of Gettysburg High School girls at a Belgian Baby Party. The object of the party was to interest the girls in the need of these unfortunate children and to have plans made for sewing on baby outfits. A baby was presented with a package wrapped in the American colors and soon appeared dressed in comfortable little clothes instead of in the ragged blanket which had been its only covering. This graphic presentation of the Belgian condition interested the girls very much.

The High School girls were addressed by Mr. H. T. Secrist, of the War Department Commission, on Training Camp Activities, and by Mr. Donald Price, who was the predecessor of Mr. Secrist in Gettysburg last year. Miss Hearsey then discussed with the girls the desirability of forming a club for the summer with the purpose of rendering service in whatever way possible, and organizing recreation and athletics to develop alert minds and vigorous bodies as a patriotic duty.

A club was organized, taking as its name the Jeanne d'Arc Club, to meet once a week and carry out a program including physical and mental development and service work.

This is a fair example of the sort of girls' work that club and recreation leaders of the Y. W. C. A. are carrying on as special war work in camp communities.

The Patriotic League, which is an idea that originated in the Y. W. C. A., has spread throughout the country enrolling hundreds of thousands of girls in an army whose oath of allegiance is as follows:

"I pledge to express my patriotism
By doing better than ever before whatever work I have to do;
By rendering whatever service I can to my country and community at this time;
By living up to the highest standards of character and honor and helping others to do the same."

This league is for girls of every nationality and creed and through it the girls of America are being afforded an opportunity for a sane, wholesome outlet for their patriotism.

Baldness Conquered

RECIPE MAILED FREE

A veteran business man, who was almost completely bald and had tried numerous tonics, lotions, shampoos, etc., without benefit, came across, while on a journey, an Indians' recipe by which he grew a complete crop of healthy, luxuriant hair that he now possesses.

Others—men and women—have reported remarkable hair growth by the same method. Whoever wishes the recipe may obtain it free by writing to John Hart Brittain, BA-222, Station F, New York, N. Y. Or obtain a box of the ointment, Kotalko, made according to the perfected recipe, at the drug store, ready for use.

Indians' Secret of Hair Growth

In a vast number of cases, when hair falls out, the roots are not dead, but remain imbedded in the scalp, alive, like seeds or bulbs, needing only fertility. The usual alkaline shampoos, alcoholized hair tonics, etc., are of no avail in such cases. The Indians' ointment nourishes the hair and stimulates the growth.

Kotalko fertilizes the scalp and induces hair growth in every case possible; wonderful results reported. For men's, women's and children's hair. If you are bald, or losing hair, or have dandruff, you should try Kotalko. It is a pleasure to observe the starting of new hair and its steady increase until a prolific growth supersedes thin hair or baldness. Cut out this notice; show to others who want beautiful hair. The recipe is free. This is genuine.

CARRIE CHAPMAN CATT

President Through Her Pleads for World-wide Woman Suffrage.

Washington.—The President notified the Suffragists that he hopes Congress will not end the present session until the senate passes the amendment to the Constitution granting women the right to vote. TROOPS FLOW TO FRONT

Baker Tells Cadets U Boats Cannot Alter Government's Plan.

General March Adds That Number of Men Will Constantly Increase Until Victory Is Won.

West Point, N. Y.—More than a million American fighting men will be in service in France in the near future, Secretary Baker told the graduates of the United States Military Academy.

Supplementing his recent announcement in Washington that United States troops "exceeding 700,000 in number" have disembarked on French soil the secretary told the cadets "it is not unfair to speculate that we will shortly pass the million mark."

Gen. Peyton C. March, chief of staff, who made commencement day the occasion of his first official visit to the academy, said that neither the menace of raiding German submarines off the Atlantic coast nor the territorial gains of the enemy on the western front will affect America's policy of sending men to France as fast as ships can carry them.

The graduation was that of the class of 1919, to the members of which diplomas were awarded a year ahead of time, the first since 1817 to attain that distinction, because of the urgent demand in the army for trained officers.

Secretary Baker, who awarded the diplomas to the graduates, told them they were destined to have a part in leading the armies of the nation to a victorious peace. "After that," he said, "as officers of the regular army you will prepare not for war, but to be ready for another war if anybody wants to make it."

Mr. Baker declared that the United States became a belligerent because "Germany tried to crush individual human happiness and liberty, which we call the theory of democracy.

"We have joined a combination in which France and Britain and Italy and the United States have assembled in France the greatest force for righteousness the world has ever seen," he continued. "We see in that combination a submergency of international discord and of national selfishness."

1200 New York Doctors Fighting Poison Gas.

1200 New York physicians regularly prescribe JOHN'S DIGESTIVE TABLETS as the most perfect form of relief known for these stomach disorders. The TABLETS are highly beneficial for gastric and intestinal indigestion, heartburn, acid or sour stomach, flatulence and gastric catarrh. They sure do vanish that poison gas which is the basis of most stomach ailments, as well as banish bad breath which usually heralds that gas-filled stomach.

Get the TABLETS at your drug store. They insure quick, lasting relief by taking three to six dissolved in a glass of water or chewed before swallowing. Have JOHN'S DIGESTIVE TABLETS handy in the dining room for chronic cases of gastric or intestinal indigestion—as one or two TABLETS should be taken before each meal

Coalless Monday

By MARCIA MEREDITH

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Will you please get off the wire?" The voice, though young and feminine, was not entirely pleasant.

"I believe I took my receiver off first," came back good-naturedly. "I am trying to get the janitor. Are you the janitor's wife?"

"How ridiculous! Where is the elevator boy to answer the 'phone? I want the janitor."

A laugh came back through the telephone. "Everybody wants the janitor. The last I heard he had gone out to try and buy soft coal. I dare say you'll be in the same boat that I am—freeze to death in your apartment. You know it won't do any good to kick, but, like me, nothing else will keep you warm."

There was no answer. Freda Tilson's receiver slammed back on the hook that held it, and it was [illegible] that she had been inclined to be hers [illegible] apartment she had [illegible] some [illegible] creature who dared to talk to her good when he did not know her and [illegible] she hadn't the most remote [illegible] who it was. That would have been a lib, however, for she really did know that it was the young man who [illegible] in bachelor state in the somewhat more spacious and luxurious apartment in front of her own, the greater luxury and higher rent of his apartment being due to the fact that while he managed to draw to himself a weekly check for $75 for writing "thrillers" for a popular weekly, she pounded a typewriter somewhere in the "downtown" district to the tune of sixty a month.

To her, having an apartment of her own, with a little place she could call home, was a luxury that she had earned by much economy in the way of amusement and "[illegible]." His living there was put down to his New England origin, for Victor Paige was more of a miser than a spendthrift, and he would rather die alone on the simple fare that his aging colored housekeeper made for him than to spend many dimes in strange restaurants. Now it happened that the typewriter that Fred[illegible] used was located in the [illegible] of Victor Paige [illegible] to deliver his manuscript, and [illegible] chin with the editor. Perhaps she felt a secret grievance, because, though she had noticed the [illegible] that he frequented her office and his abode under the same roof, he had sought no excuse to speak to her as they passed in the halls going hence or venturing forth. It does seem strange that Victor never sought the excuse, for Freda would have been glad to speak to. And there was nothing repelling in her round face or [illegible]. But then, Victor came from New England.

As Freda performed the task of dusting and straightening up her little apartment, clad to the chin in a sweater and wearing gloves on her hands as she worked, she listened intently for a ring at her doorbell that would mean that the letter she was waiting for had come. When all chance of the delivery was over she descended to the entrance to make sure that the boy in attendance there had not failed to deliver it to her.

Strange that Victor Paige should have gone forth at the same time. He waited while she made her complaint.

"In the first place," she said, "it is perfectly ridiculous that on the one day in the week when we have to be home, and when it would really seem that apartments and houses ought to have enough coal to make them comfortable, we should be made to suffer in this way. How I am ever going to write on my typewriter, with hands stiff from cold, is more than I can tell. It seems most extraordinary that my manuscripts did not come by the mail this morning. My office is closed, and it is absolutely necessary for me to typewrite some revised manuscript that the editor was sending by special delivery. Are you quite sure nothing has come for me?"

The dusky skinned attendant nodded in the negative.

"And is there no hope of any heat?"

Again a negative nod.

"Well, then, the only thing for me to do is to go and get some oil. Thank goodness, I bought a stove."

Now it was Victor's inning. Having heard Freda's plaint and the unsatisfactory replies, he did not mention the frigid atmosphe[illegible] in his apartment as well as in hers.

"I say, Cinderella—beg pardon, I forgot your name was Hannibal—you haven't seen anything of a strong messenger boy with a typewriter, have you? Of course you haven't. But, you see, the place I usually deliver my copy is closed, and I was going to pound it out for myself today, so I sent for a typewriter. But I guess they had too many orders before mine. Well if there's no hope for heat I'll have to burn oil."

And he returned to his rooms, calling the name of Lunch, who came every day at noon to keep house for him, blessed, because she had suggested to him that when steam heat failed the temperature could be improved by burning oil stoves.

The fact that fate had some deep design in choosing to have Victor Paige and Freda Tilson take apartments in the same house really might have been suspected when, a quarter of an hour later, another accidental [illegible] grocery. Freda came hurrying in with the base of an old stove, her self-consciousness at having to carry this awkward burden only making her cheeks pinker and her eyes rounder.

"Please fill this with oil," she told the grocer's boy, and then blushed a little rosier as she realized that Victor Paige was standing at her elbow. He took his hat off, and then, when Freda averted her look he awkwardly waved his hat in the air and stroked the cat with the brim of it to try to convince himself that he had meant to take it off anyway, and that he was not a bit embarrassed by Freda's hauteur.

"We ain't got no oil—all sold out," came from the grocer's boy, just as Victor Paige was inquiring of the grocer himself whether it happened that oil stoves were a part of his equipment. In the grocery store back in his New England home town he recalled that such trifling articles were always sold. And as the grocer assured him that the only places to get such things were the household furnishing stores, and they were all closed because it was coalless Monday, he confided to him. He knew the grocer didn't care, and he didn't care whether he did care, but he spoke in a loud, clear voice. Could it have been that it was for Freda's benefit?

"You see, the woman that keeps house for me suggested that if I bought some oil I could manage to keep warm, even when the steam was [illegible] up in the apartment, and I was such an ass as to forget that one really needed something to burn it in. I have a gallon of oil, but what good does that do?"

Freda did listen, and for just one moment she was tempted to tell her neighbor that between the two they might manage to get some sort of [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] Paige [illegible] which both [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Paige [illegible] Did he stop to come into her apartment, or should she go into his? There was small choice in the mere matter.

To pick up a kettle for Victor Paige, carrying an odoriferous gallon of kerosene, some illegible notes on stray bits of paper, and a dish of apples—Victor did not write without apples for refreshment—went into Freda's small apartment. When lunch time came Freda had forgotten her resentment, and Victor, truth to tell, was as much in love with her as he had ever been with any girl.

"If I had some eggs I'd make an omelet and ask you to lunch," she said, just as [illegible] finally.

And although Victor knew that his Dinah was coming to make lunch in his apartment that day, he hurried to get some eggs that he was right in guessing she had left in his ice box. And so they lunched, and so they worked on through the afternoon.

"What's the use of resisting the inevitable," he said as she handed him the last page of his manuscript from her typewriter. "We can't either of us get along without the other. We would both have been miserable today alone—"

"It does seem strange. Do you believe in fate?"

And apparently Victor did, for he was always sure it was fate that threw him and his wife together that coalless Monday.

High Cost of Patches.

There is no economy in patches. You may have a frugal wife who persists in patching your trousers, but you always feel miserable and degraded in such garments. They make you feel like a thief, or like 30 cents in counterfeit money. You are forever trying to hide them from view. . . . I have worn them myself and I know how uneasy a man feels in good society when he expects each gust of wind to fan his coat tails aside, exposing his wife's needlework. Zim writes in Cartoons. A patch in the seat of your trousers, if it be accidentally exposed in public, will reduce your market value 99½ per cent. If you cannot afford so sudden and enormous a decline in your stocks, and are not prepared to cover margins, you'd better accept a fool's advice and unload your holey belongings upon the magnum before your wife gets out her darning needle and patch bag.

Strenuous Reform.

"Tommy, you mustn't play with that little Gruggins boy. His manners need mending."

"That's all right, ma. I'm working on his manners. If they don't improve in a day or two I lose my standing as the hardest hittin' kid in my block."

Feminine Finance.

He—You must remember, dear, we are just starting out in life and we must economize.

She—But don't you think getting into debt is the best way? Then we'll have to economize.

[illegible] town, received a letter from his nephew, George W. Rider, now "Somewhere in France," stating that he is slowly recovering from the effects of being "gassed" while in action, and that he is still in the hospital but able to be about. He was in the 102nd U. S. Infantry.

Stomach Troubles.

Many remarkable cures of stomach troubles have been effected by Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. One man who had spent over two thousand dollars for medicine and treatment was cured by a few boxes of these tablets. Price 25 cents. Samples free at the People's Drug Store.
